

The Downsizing Decision Matrix

Who will downsize, and when?	Before You Die	After You Die
You	Why not save yourself and your loved ones some grief and create Your Personal Inventory now? It will help you keep track of your stuff while you are alive, and help your loved ones know what to do with your belongings should something happen to you.	No, you're not doing anything after you die. No one's that organized, LOL!
Someone Else	What a drag it is for family members to have to downsize a loved one in an emergency, or against their will! But, if you really need to move to assisted living, and you truly are no longer able to help make decisions...or if you're unwilling to help...then they have no choice, do they? Solution: Your Personal Inventory	Your loved ones are sad enough that you died. They don't know what to do with your stuff, and they feel guilty parting with any of it. But they can't keep it all, either...unless they do keep it all... which is worse. Do you really want to heap the responsibility of deciding what to do with all your possessions on top of their grief? Solution: Your Personal Inventory
